Justin is a dynamic keynote speaker and trainer that has spoken in front of more than 300 audiences from small team meetings to large keynote events. He has a very relaxed and matter-of-fact style that makes groups feel comfortably engaged while moving in a timely manner.

Justin is an expert on personal productivity and worked directly with David Allen, author of the New York Times bestseller “Getting Things Done,” to create a new version of Allen’s training course. His research and writing has been published in places like CNBC.com, Fox Business, Bloomberg, and HR.com. Justin’s coaching and advice are published regularly in the Crucial Skills newsletter, which goes to more than 350,000 subscribers. He has addressed audiences on topics such as bridging generational gaps in the workplace, personal productivity, team accountability, crucial conversations, and change management.

"That was the best training I’ve had . . . Justin was an exceptional facilitator and speaker."